Viewers remake DeGeneres

By Anne Oldenburg, USA TODAY

She usually wears a pullover sweater, casual trousers and some kind of funky tennis shoes.

Talk show host Ellen DeGeneres wasn't completely satisfied with her new getup. She said, "I think it's a cute outfit for some boy. This is so not me."

By Ron P. Jaffe, Warner Bros

On Thursday, that all changed. Ellen DeGeneres had a makeover. Nothing that would qualify as extreme, but the talk show host did have a new look.

"I think it's a cute outfit for somebody," she told the audience, adding, "not me. This is so not me."

Take her black pointy boots. "These heels," she said, "Why are they so tiny? They're like balancing on a thick ballpoint pen. I'm no engineer, but shouldn't what we're supported by be larger than us?"

DeGeneres, 45, wasn't fond of her low-rise pants, either, saying they're made to show off thong underwear. "That's a sexy thing. But I wear boxers. ... They tried to get me in a thong. I promise you they did. I said no."

More than 5,000 viewers logged on to www.ellendegeneres.com for the chance to redress DeGeneres. Thursday's winner: Michelle Berger of New York, who worked with stylist Alison Deyette. Three more makeovers are planned, one each week in November.
